

PHIL 3480: CRITICAL THINKING AND WRITING IN PHILOSOPHY
SPRING 2022

SECTION 001: REMOTE (ZOOM) FROM 1/11/2022 TO 1/24/2022;
THEREAFTER, IN HLMS 177, 12:30-1:45 P.M., T-TH

SECTION 002: REMOTE (ZOOM) FROM 1/11/2022 TO 1/24/2022;
THEREAFTER, IN HLMS 177, 2:00-3:15 P.M., T-TH

Jason Potter

Phone: (303)402-9465 (landline) or 720-252-0643 (preferred: cell); E-Mail: jason.potter@colorado.edu

Web Site: <http://philophizer.com/index.html> (Please note: all handouts, along with lecture outlines, study guides, this Syllabus, a course calendar with all assignments listed are available both at this website and on the Canvas site)

Office Hours: 3:30-5:30 pm M-W-F (via ZOOM AT MEETING ID: 999 3806 9795).

Course Description

This course is different from some other courses in philosophy that you may have taken. If you approach it in the same way as many typical philosophy courses you will miss what is important here. You have been trained to treat philosophy as an academic subject, one that others produce and you consume. In this class I hope to help you to think like a productive philosopher. That can require looking closely at the writings of well-known, accomplished philosophers to discern and uncover their particular ways of thinking. Their writings are useful guideposts in the development of your own philosophical thinking. They also stand as models for the expression of your own philosophical ideas, both orally and in written form. In the end, it is my hope you will expand upon those fundamental skills, methods, concepts, and distinctions you already possess or grasp and that are essential for the study and practice of philosophy. The basic skills covered include those involved in preparing for and writing philosophical essays, the skills needed to be a deep, active reader of philosophical articles and books, and those you will need when extracting and evaluating any arguments those texts contain. As with any genuine interaction with the best minds, your own mind will be improved in the process.

Course Objectives

1. That you learn to identify arguments, an important tool of philosophical work.
2. That you learn to read philosophical works in an active and comprehensive way, and more importantly, to develop the skills necessary to consider alternative versions of what the author meant by their assertions, alternatives that you then attempt to refine into the most-plausible interpretation (very few people, including some working philosophers, develop this skill to the highest level, and philosophy is always worse off for every failure to achieve the highest expression of this skill).
3. That you learn to express your thoughts clearly, to listen carefully to what others have to say, and to recognize when your own thinking has become inflexible and over-determined by your accidental and/or well-worn habits of mind.
4. That you make progress in the fine art of assessing, analyzing and criticizing arguments and the framework of thought and analysis that supports them.
5. Most importantly, that you develop skills for considering the grounds and wellsprings of philosophical problems and questions: where do they come from? Why should you, or anyone, care if they go unsolved/unanswered? Why are the particular problems addressed in any given period in the long history of philosophy, including the ones under discussion in contemporary academic philosophy, the problems/questions that matter? If you want to treat philosophy seriously, you need, at minimum, to make ongoing attempts to answer to these questions.

Required Texts

We will be only reading articles and/or papers that I make available through the Canvas site for this course, including in particular Ludwig Wittgenstein's short book On Certainty. Also, you should look at the Supplementary Packet for this course (available on the web site), which contains:

- (i) Helpful hints for writing philosophy papers, (ii) A list of abbreviations used in grading papers, (iii) A model history-of-philosophy paper, and (iv) A very brief but amazingly informative survey of informal logic.

Course Requirements & Percentage of Final Grade

(1) Five Diagnostic Exercises	10%
(2) Attendance	20%
(3) Three Reading Summaries (given orally by a two-person group)		15%
(4) Quizzes	10%
(5) Writing Exercise One	25%
(6) Second Paper	20%

Notes on Course Requirements:

(1) Our work will be more or less evenly divided between exercises and assignments designed to improve your reading skills and those designed to improve your writing skills. Many class sessions will be spent discussing the readings in detail, often after you have submitted a reading summary, or we have had a presentation from two of your classmates on it.

(2) Since a philosophical essay is not like other kinds of essays you may have written in college (or elsewhere), it is strongly recommended that before preparing your papers, you read very carefully the helpful hints for doing philosophy papers, the list of abbreviations used in grading papers, and the model history-of-philosophy paper (all to be found in the supplementary packet available on Canvas for the course and the website under Lectures and Handouts). I do assume that you have already learned how to write essays in English. Here you are trying to learn how to write philosophical essays in English.

Clarifications, Rules of the Road, Regrettable Necessities & Errata

- (1) What your grade means:
 - A: Superior work
 - B: Good work
 - C: Work with some strengths, balanced against clear weaknesses
 - D: Work with few strengths, many weaknesses
 - F: Work that brings CPR to mind (and I don't mean the Critique of Pure Reason)
- (2) Late papers, exercises, reading summaries, etc., are a Really Bad Thing. The usual excusing conditions must exist if I am to make exceptions to this rule. Check with me if you want to know what sorts of conditions are excusable, but most obviously they include illness (especially possible COVID-19 symptoms) and personal emergencies.
- (3) Breaches of academic honesty will receive the harshest allowable university penalty. However, I do think it is worth noting that to cheat in philosophy is to cheat oneself, since you undermine the potential development of your own mind (which is the point of any education worth having).
- (4) You are responsible for the entire reading assignment—not just what we discuss in class.
- (5) Reading assignments in philosophy tend to be both challenging and time consuming. You might want to take this into account when planning your spring semester. This course is as difficult as any technical course you take (calculus, for example). Do not assume it is a cakewalk....you will regret the assumption later.
- (6) Readings should be done prior to the class for which they are assigned. If this involves a range of days, you should have everything read by the first day in the range.
- (7) Total points possible: 100.
- (8) What to expect from me: prompt and honest feedback, clear leading questions, discussions and lectures (which will only occur occasionally), sufficient contact outside class (e.g., office hours, e-mail, the web site, group chat and blog exchanges).
- (9) Since the institution of privacy protections for students in the late 1990s, it is no longer possible to leave papers in the Philosophy Department office for distribution to those who are not in class the day that an assignment is returned. It is your responsibility to get your assignments back if you are not there the day I return your work. I suggest you email me when you are hopeful that I will bring work to class that has been returned on some previous date, so that I can bring it to the next class session. Since students often do not pick up their final papers, please let me know in advance if you would like detailed comments on yours (otherwise, I will only grade, not comment). Also, if you want your final paper returned to you, please give me a self-addressed, stamped envelope for that purpose when handing in the paper at the end of the semester.
- (10) I am happy to discuss grades with you after assignments are returned, but please save these discussions for office hours.
- (11) Arrangements to extend deadlines for papers, to be excused for class absences, etc., can only be made in person. Do not email me about these things except to warn me about a problem and to arrange a meeting to discuss them.
- (12) This syllabus is subject to revision.

Assignment Schedule

To be announced through the Canvas Calendar for this course with cues made available through a separate calendar made available on the course website.

One Last Thing

Since I find it very helpful to speak with each of you at least once, there will be required, short (10–minute) meetings during office hours the first month or so of the semester to discuss your progress. I will be distributing a digital sign-up sheet in the form of a Doodle poll so you can arrange a time and date that suits you. Don't put this off too long as it helps me to understand your work in my class if I've gotten to know your background, interests, and ambitions through a private conversation.

Basic Needs: I believe that in order to learn, students need to have their basic needs met: food to eat and a safe place to live. If you're having trouble with either, the campus has some resources for you. If you're facing food insecurity, reach out to food@colorado.edu, and they will work with you to find food resources. If you're having trouble paying rent or facing housing insecurity, you can get in touch with these advocates: Boulder County Housing & Human Services at 303-441-1000 or Off-campus Housing at och@colorado.edu & 303-492-7053. For assistance with landlord-tenant matters, contact Mediation Services at 303-441-4364 & mediation@bouldercolorado.edu. A Student Emergency Fund has been created to support students experiencing a temporary financial hardship as a result of COVID-19. Other campus resources are available here (including mental health resources and free therapy). Case manager resources are also available to help you find appropriate campus and local resources. A 24/7 Suicide Prevention hotline is available for you: just call 303-492-2277. Please don't hesitate to also approach me if you have trouble negotiating these resources.

Campus-Wide Policies

ACCOMMODATION FOR DISABILITIES

If you qualify for accommodations because of a disability, please submit your accommodation letter from Disability Services to your faculty member in a timely manner so that your needs can be addressed. Disability Services determines accommodations based on documented disabilities in the academic environment. Information on requesting accommodations is located on the Disability Services website. Contact Disability Services at 303-492-8671 or dsinfo@colorado.edu for further assistance. If you have a temporary medical condition or injury, see Temporary Medical Conditions under the Students tab on the Disability Services website.

CLASSROOM BEHAVIOR

Students and faculty each have responsibility for maintaining an appropriate learning environment. Those who fail to adhere to such behavioral standards may be subject to discipline. Professional courtesy and sensitivity are especially important with respect to individuals and topics dealing with race, color, national origin, sex, pregnancy, age, disability, creed, religion, sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression, veteran status, political affiliation or political philosophy. Class rosters are provided to the instructor with the student's legal name. I will gladly honor your request to address you by an alternate name or gender pronoun. Please advise me of this preference early in the semester so that I may make appropriate changes to my records. For more information, see the policies on classroom behavior and the Student Code of Conduct.

HONOR CODE

All students enrolled in a University of Colorado Boulder course are responsible for knowing and adhering to the Honor Code. Violations of the policy may include: plagiarism, cheating, fabrication, lying, bribery, threat, unauthorized access to academic materials, clicker fraud, submitting the same or similar work in more than one course without permission from all course instructors involved, and aiding academic dishonesty. All incidents of academic misconduct will be reported to the Honor Code (honor@colorado.edu; 303-492-5550). Students who are found responsible for violating the academic integrity policy will be subject to nonacademic sanctions from the Honor Code as well as academic sanctions from the faculty member. Additional information regarding the Honor Code academic integrity policy can be found at the Honor Code Office website.

SEXUAL MISCONDUCT, DISCRIMINATION, HARASSMENT AND/OR RELATED

RETALIATION

The University of Colorado Boulder (CU Boulder) is committed to fostering a positive and welcoming learning, working, and living environment. CU Boulder will not tolerate acts of sexual misconduct intimate partner abuse (including dating or domestic violence), stalking, protected-class discrimination or harassment by members of our community. Individuals who believe they have been subject to misconduct or retaliatory actions for reporting a concern should contact the Office of Institutional Equity and Compliance (OIEC) at 303-492-2127 or cureport@colorado.edu. Information about the OIEC, university policies, anonymous reporting, and the campus resources can be found on the OIEC website.

Please know that faculty and instructors have a responsibility to inform OIEC when made aware of incidents of sexual misconduct, discrimination, harassment and/or related retaliation, to ensure that individuals impacted receive information about options for reporting and support resources.

RELIGIOUS HOLIDAYS

Campus policy regarding religious observances requires that faculty make every effort to deal reasonably and fairly with all students who, because of religious obligations, have conflicts with scheduled exams, assignments or required attendance. In this class, missed assignments, class sessions or scheduled exams that result from religious observances will be accommodate so long as I am warned of the time conflict at least two weeks in advance of the assignment, class session or scheduled exam.

See the campus policy regarding religious observances for full details.